THE STRIKERS' TRIAL

A Private Tells What He Saw and Heard

AT STRIKERS' HEADQUARTERS

The Committee Did Not Think the Militia Would Obey Orders to Shoot.

WOODLAND, July 30.—Court was continued today from the morning session to 1 o'clock on account of the illness of Worden.

The first witness was H. F. Marshall, a private of the Stockton guards. He testified that he visited the headquarters of the American Railway Union at Sacramento in uniform on July 7th. Knox, Mullin and Compton were there. The conversation turned on the incidents of July 4th at the depot. Compton remarked that had a shot been fired by the militia on that day there would not a man of them have been left to tell the story. Knox assented to this statement. The committee did not think the militia would obey an order to shoot the strikers. At this or a subsequent conversation Knox stated that if the regulars undertook to run trains they would not run them very far.

The second conversation took place at the same place. There was a fourth party present at this time and something was said about wrecking of trains. The unknown man said he thought "the boys made a mistake." The committee assented to the statement, but one of them remarked that "they had brought it on themselves."

The third meeting of witness with the committee was after the seizure of the arms found in the headquarters by the military. One of the committee said that only a very small part of the arms possessed by the strikers were captured. Some one of the committee said the strikers could throw 1,000 men into the field at a moment's notice. In one of the above described conversations the result of a conflict between the militia and strikers was discussed. One of the committee thought that the militia would stand no show, because there were too many of their crowd. Witness said that the organization and discipline of the soldiers would make up for lack of numbers. One of the committee said the strikers would drill too.

Counsel then questioned the witness if he had told on the street that the guns captured by the militia were found in Knox's room. Witness did not know that he had.

Did you find any guns in Knox's room? The witness was compelled to admit that he had not. He then attempted to explain that he was a friend of Knox, whereat General Hart demanded severely, "Do you consider it a friendship to speak pleasantly to a man's face and then go out on the street and stab him in the back?"

"Did you ever see any arms in the rooms of the meditation committee?"

"Yes, I saw pistols on several people and some cartridges in a drawer."

"Did you ever see any pistols on Knox, Compton or Mullin?"

"No."

H. Maloney, deputy United States marshal, was sworn and testified that he was in Sacramento during the time that Marshal Baldwin was there to quell the strike. Witness knew Knox, Mullin, Compton and Worden. As to occurences on July 4th at the Sacramento depot witness testified that he saw Worden there; he was very noisy and using very harsh expressions toward Engineer Clark, who was in his cab. Marshal Baldwin ordered the witness to arrest Worden, but one of the committee interceded with the marshal in Worden's behalf, and the marshal ordered witness to release Worden.

C. C. Howell, an employe of the Sacramento Industrial Improvement Association, was the next witness. Witness testified that he saw the meditation committee before the meeting of the protective association at Pioneer hall on the afternoon of July 5th. They were there in response to an invitation issued by the association. Witness frequently saw armed men going up and down stairs and several times saw armed men other than the military in the streets in the neighborhood of the building. The highest number of these armed people he saw at any one time was fifteen. These men often went into the building on the opposite side of the street. Knox was asked whether he would stand by his home and family or the A.R.U., to which he replied that he would stand by the order. Further testimony elicited nothing new, and after the witness was excused court adjourned.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

Damages Demanded from Japan for a Transport.

SHANGHAI, July 30.—The branch Chinese imperial maritime customs at Chemulpo, Fu Shan and Chuan Shan continue business, receiving Corean duties as usual. Japan has not interfered with the collection of these duties.

LONDON, July 30.—It is stated that the owner of the private transport Kow Shing has demanded damages from Japan through the English foreign office for sinking that vessel.

The day following the fight between the Chinese and Japanese ships a Japanese cruiser encountered a Chinese ironclad in Prince Jerome gulf. The Chinese claim their vessel was victorious and the Japanese cruiser was taken off by her consort in a crippled condition.

Gambling in Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The grand jury today filed a report saying: "We find gambling carried on to the fullest extent in Chicago, with doors wide open and cappers and stool pigeons plying their vocation to catch the unwary for the purpose of fleecing any victim who happens to fall into their hands, and that heads of the police department of this city are giving some of the places mentioned ample protection from arrest and prosecution."

Death From a Fall.

SONOMA, Cal., July 30.—John Harper, an old resident and prominent farmer of this valley, met an instantaneous death on his farm this morning by being pitched violently from the seat of a wagon. Harper was in the act of taking hold of the reins when the horses suddenly started, throwing him to the ground, breaking his neck in the fall.

Ryan Sentenced at Hanford.

HANFORD, July 30.—William Ryan was today sentenced to fourteen years in San Quentin for the murder of James McCaffrey at the Dallas school house in May last.

SACRAMENTO STRIKERS.

Former Employes and Merchants Interview Towne.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—The firemen and train men who left the service of the Southern Pacific at the beginning of the strike, hope soon to return to their old positions. Delegations of former employes and Sacramento merchants held consultations with General Manager Towne today. Towne stated the company was willing to accept applications from their former employes not engaged in violence, and their applications would be considered without prejudice.

It is thought the company would be willing to re-employ the men provided they show regret for the past and offer to refrain from striking in the future unless an actual point of difference is pending between them and the company. The engineers are anxious for the return of the old firemen to work since the new firemen on duty on trains between here and Reno are losing time, the chief difficulty being climbing the steep grades. The engineers say the new helpers are not able to keep the engines hot going over the mountain.

OMNIBUS COMPLAINT.

It Will Take the Place of Those on File Against the Strikers.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—The United States district attorney is preparing an omnibus complaint against the American Railway Union men now in jail in northern California charged with offenses against the federal law. The complaint will probably be lodged before United States Commissioner Hancock as committing magistrate tomorrow. This complaint is to take the place of the multiplicity of complaints now on file against the railroad strikers. The charge will allege interference with interstate commerce and trade, and conspiracy to retard progress of United States mails.

The desire is to simplify the many charges against strikers of overt acts occurring at different times and places. "We do not want these men to feel," said Assistant United States District Attorney Knight this evening, "that we are piling up charges against them. There is a desire to treat the strikers in a spirit of fairness and not to persecute them, but to punish them for their criminal acts." The defendants will include between thirty and forty strikers from Sacramento and Red Bluff, several of whom are now incarcerated in San Francisco.

The Desert Land Law.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The senate today passed the house bill exempting those who have entered public land under the desert land law from making the annual improvements required by law, and extending the period within which final proof can be made to five years.

POLITICIAN KIDNAPED

BY POPULISTS IN SPOKANE COUNTY, WASH.

His Hat, Covered With Bloody Hair, Found by a Searching Party.

SPOKANE, Wash., July 30.—People in the southern part of Spokane county are intensely excited over the kidnaping and murder of Charles Gloystein, a prominent farmer and Republican politician of Mica. Gloystein was called out of bed at midnight last night and has not since been seen. His hat, cut with a blunt instrument and covered with bloody hair, was found today by a searching party. The missing man had incurred the enmity of the Populists of his neighborhood, and the feeling against him in that party was intense. A short time ago he was hung in effigy and a number of threats were made against his life.

The Markets.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—Wheat—Strong; December, $1.01⅞; May, $1.08¼.

Barley—Quiet; December, 93½c; spot, new, 84⅝c.

Corn—$1.45.

Bran—$16 per ton.

War Material Offered China.

LONDON, July 30.—During the last fortnight firms having large Chinese interests have offered steamships, rifles, ammunition, etc., at very reasonable figures, and today several of these firms received cablegrams that prompt delivery will be a condition of sale. Chinese and Japanese securities are still at a normal figure.

Child Fatally Injured.

LODI, July 30.—The wife and child of Andy Shields were riding in a buggy drawn by an unbroken colt today, when the animal ran away, upsetting the buggy and probably fatally injuring the child. The mother was slightly bruised.

A Copper Mine Closed.

MARQUETTE, Mich., July 30.—The Central Copper Mine Company has closed down after forty years continuous operations. The vein is exhausted. This ends the copper mining industry in this country.

Eggs at the Hospital.

A reader of THE REPUBLICAN in scrutinizing the recent article in these columns on the city and county hospital says that he noticed that 200 chickens had been raised, but wanted to know what became of the eggs. Were they supplied to the patients or was a revenue derived from them, or were eggs charged for by the grocers holding hospital contracts? Chairman Letcher said yesterday that a regular account is kept of all the egg supplied from the county farm; that the patients are supplied with them as necessary; and that a regular account is kept of everything in the egg line. Eggs do not figure in the grocerymen's account.

A New Time Card.

A new time card has been issued by the Southern Pacific Company, to take effect on Wednesday, August 1st, at 12.01 a.m. The only change on this division will be the Los Angeles express, that has heretofore arrived at 1.10 a.m. and and left at 1.25. Under the new time table it will arrive at 12.50 a.m. and leave at 1, making but a ten-minute stop.

Thomas Anton returned yesterday from San Francisco, where he has been for the past month. He has accepted a position on the Examiner, and will enter upon his duties about September 1st.

SIGNS OF WAVERING

Uneasiness Among Democratic Senators.

COMPROMISE BEING SUGGESTED

Urgent Appeals to Pass a Tariff Bill Which Will Not Favor Trusts.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—For the first time since the tariff bill has been in conference there are signs of wavering from the strong line that has stood behind the senate bill. "The senate bill or none" has been repeated today less frequently and with less emphasis than heretofore. The only explanation for the brief conference today is the fact that the house conferees feel the situation is changing in their favor. The mails and telegraph bring to Democratic senators urgent appeals to pass a bill which will not favor trusts, and which will be in line with the demands of the party platform.

These requests upon senators are indorsements of the position of the President and house in the main points of difference. These telegrams are having effect, and have caused the senators who are most insistent upon the senate bill as regards coal, iron and sugar no little concern. Pressure is being brought to bear on the Democratic conferees of the senate to report an agreement with a modification of the principal items, a compromise being suggested to the extent of a flat advalorem rate on sugar of 45 per cent with an extension of the bounty of January 1, 1895, free iron ore, coal 40 cents per ton with a reciprocity provision that coal shall be admitted free from such countries as grant free admission to coal produced in the United States.

The situation has caused considerable uneasiness among Democrats of the senate, and especially those who are known to be steadfast in their demands for the senate bill in its main features. The reliance of the house upon outside pressure and Democratic sentiment that seems to be rallying around the President and house from the country at large it is claimed will grow stronger from day to day until the senate conferees will be compelled to yield. The prestige which the administration obtained in the conference over the unconditional repeal of the silver purchasing law has been pointed out as being evidence of its determination now, and with the solid backing of the Democratic leaders in the house it will bring about a similar result in the tariff bill.

The tension between the senate and house was as marked at the close of the session today as it had been at any time previous. The Democratic members of the conference found themselves in a complete deadlock when they met during the forenoon and a full conference called for 1 o'clock found itself without business before it. The full conference did not continue to exceed fifteen minutes, and the proceedings consisted of a statement by the Democrats to the Republicans that the Democratic conferees had been unable to reach an understanding and the suggestion on the part of Chairman Wilson of the house conferees that the conference adjourn subject to the call of the chirman, which suggestion was acquiesced in by the Republicans.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

Adjutant General Allen Warmly Commends It.

From the Los Angeles Times.

The editor of the Times has received from Adjutant General Allen the following letter, which is printed in compliance with his urgent request:

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
SACRAMENTO, July 20, 1894.

Colonel H. G. Otis, Editor Times, Los Angeles: I wish to correct some very erroneous statements found in the Times since the first call for the National Guard to protect life and property under the President's proclamation. All these statements—and they are made in papers all over the state—insist that the guard, on July 4th, at this place, refused to obey orders, became demoralized and affiliated with the strikers, which is untrue. Every order has been obeyed, as I know, and the trouble was not in disobeying orders, but in not having any orders to obey. I am in a position to know as much about the condition and discipline of the guard as any one, and while matters might be improved, it is unjust to say the guard refused to obey orders or neglected their duties. The forces were placed under the orders of the United States marshal, as is provided by law, and for hours stood in the intense heat waiting for orders. Finally, after long discussion, General Dimond was directed to call off the troops from the vicinity of the depot, and to station a company each at the American river and the Yolo bridges. This duty was promptly performed, and the remaining commands bivouacked for the night. One company of the regiment in this city, composed largely of men who went out on the strike, refused to march and were disarmed, the arms stored in the armory.

It is not true, as stated, that the companies placed to guard the bridges were left without food, and that they were supplied by the strikers. Nothing of the kind. Rations were sent to those commands, perhaps not as promptly as might have been done, nor as promptly as we can supply any command today, after having a complete system in all departments. You know how it was in the late war; many times you and your command went hungry, and suffered before rations could be brought up; such is the fate of a soldier. These troops were brought here upon a few hours' notice, the Stockton companies being notified after many of the men had retired to bed, and left on the incoming train without food, blankets or tents. None of the troops had had actual experience in the field, and they have learned much from this unfortunate affair. There is compensation in the thought that the strikers have also learned something that will be of lasting benefit to them.

The strikers did not assist the soldiers to drag a Gatling gun. The statement is preposterous.

The men have had regular meals since July 5th. They were boarded for a few days at hotels and restaurants under contracts made under authority. Only one hotel refused to take men, and this one because the proprietors were not prepared to furnish food and wait for an appropriation.

From an experience had in the late war and a knowledge of the kind of men who carried the flag to a successful termination of that war, I can say that the National Guard of this state are just as brave, just as loyal, and are imbued with as much patriotism as were the boys who started out with you. It takes some time to bring any command to that degree of efficiency which Sherman commanded on his march to the sea. Since the failure of July 4th, for which the guard was in no way responsible—that is, the rank and file—the companies have been called into line and the offer made to discharge anyone who would not willingly obey any order he might receive, and not one has proposed to accept discharge; on the other hand, feeling the humiliation of misrepresentation, they are more determined than ever to stay till the strike is off. All the companies have been doing hard service, and the men conduct themselves like old soldiers. There is no staying about the city, and no arrests for drunkenness or disorder. It is very unfair to these men who have left home and business, in some cases at the expense of losing positions, to be misrepresented so seriously. Reasonable men will recognize the fact that it takes time to bring any body of soldiers to the more serious affairs that belong to them in times of anarchy. They are more loyal and more brave than some of the newspapers which have attacked them and which have done so much aid to the strikers.

The National Guard of this state are not cowards, they are brave; they are not demoralized, they are obedient to orders; they are not hungry, on the other hand they are now subsisting upon good food prepared by their own cooks, and are living quite as well as are the regulars camped alongside them. Guard and other duties are performed to the satisfaction of Colonel Graham, in command of the regulars, and who has the reputation of being very exacting with his officers and men. He informs me he has visited our guard lines at unexpected hours and has found our men diligent and earnest. We perform our full share of all military duties, escort trains, furnish detachments as far north as Dunsmuir and all the way to Truckee and to Oakland, and we are entitled to be fairly treated by the newspapers, and shall hope to be unless their sympathies are with the bad element which seems to control the laboring men in this unfortunate strike.

Please don't put this in some out-of-the way column, for the criticisms found in the Times were editorial, and I hope to have our side of the question fairly presented. Respectfully yours,

C. C. ALLEN, Adjutant General.

DECLARED DEAD.

JUDGE HARRIS RULES IN THE WOOTTON CASE.

Orders the Public Administrator to Take Charge of the Estate.

Judge Harris yesterday ordered the public administrator to take charge of the estate of William Wootton, who disappeared on January 31st last, and from that time no trace or tidings of him have been had leading to his whereabouts. In making the order, Judge Harris says:

"The only issue is as to whether there is sufficient evidence to raise the presumption that said Wootton is dead. The amount of evidence required to prove death varies with the nature of the case in which it is sought to be established. Thus, in a trial for murder this would have to be proved to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt. In civil cases it is usually sufficient to prove it by a preponderence of the evidence.

"Mr. Greenleaf lays down this rule: 'It may be added that where the subject of the claim is paramount, so that no injury to the absent owner can result from any mistake in regard to his death, death may be presumed from circumstances much less weighty and persuasive than will be required where the subject may be irretrievably lost to the right owner, by payment or delivery to the wrong person.'

"The disappearance of William Wootton last February, an old and highly respected citizen of this county, is darkly mysterious. His habits of life, business methods and neighborly associations added to his sudden and utter obliteration from the gaze of men but deepen that mystery.

"I have given the evidence adduced in this application the most careful study and watched daily the developments in the criminal trial involving, incidentally, the same issue, and the longer my mind dwells upon the matter the more carefully I scrutinize and weigh the whole case in all its bearings, the more irresistably am I forced to the conclusion that William Wootton is no longer alive.

"Therefore, under the law above stated, as there is a large amount of personal property that needs care and attention, in addition to the confused condition in which a part of the realty stands, I am of the opinion that this application for letters should be granted. Should time prove that I am mistaken in my conclusion that William Wootton is dead, and I trust that I am mistaken, still even in that event, this order will be to the benefit of all parties interested."

ONE BLUNDER AVERTED.

A certain chapter in the history of the blunders of Cleveland's administration might never have become known had not an enterprising newspaper man brought it to light. It relates to the Admiral Benham affair in the harbor of Rio, when he fired upon Degama's insurgent cruiser and put a sudden stop to the interference with American ships trading at that port. Two days after the affair the secretary of the navy, after a consultation with the President, sent a dispatch to Admiral Benham indorsing his action.

But when President Cleveland received the first news of the firing upon the insurgent ship he disapproved of it, and prepared a long dispatch to Admiral Benham expressing regret for the occurrence, and ending by ordering Benham to turn over his command to another, and return to Washington. This dispatch was given into the hands of translators to be put in cipher. It required several hours to do it. In the meantime the news of the affair at Rio reached the American newspapers, and they praised the prompt and patriotic action of Benham in no measured terms. It was the most popular thing that had been done during Cleveland's administration, and the American people, with one voice, indorsed it.

Cleveland saw the situation. He saw that if he condemned Benham the people would not indorse the President. There was time to head off the dispatch recalling Benham, and it was done. It was taken out of the hands of the translators, and in its stead another was sent, indorsing Benham's action and commending his promptness. Thus, the voice of the people saved the administration from a blunder which would have been only second to that in the Hawaiian affair.

THE ORIENTAL WAR.

In the war between China and Japan, now in a fair way to be fought to a finish, the spectacle presented is that of a small nation, quick, alert, enthusiastic, pitted against the largest, and at the same time the most sluggish nation in the world. Japan is compact, China is great in extent. The area of Japan is less than that of California; the area of China is greater than that of the United States, exclusive of Alaska. The population of Japan is about 35,000,000; that of China 400,000,000, or nearly twelve times as great.

Japan never has achieved much fame as a warlike nation. China has never, as a whole, been warlike; but the northwestern part, where the Tartars live, has sent out some of the most destructive armies the world has ever seen. About 500 years ago Genghis Kahn and Tamerlane led armies of Tartars which penetrated almost to the center of Europe, and never met defeat so long as they held together. One of those generals commemorated his victories by building a tower of 80,000 human skulls. No Roman, no Persian and no Egyptian conqueror ever sacrificed the human life that was lost in combat against those Chinese invaders.

Modern critics say that the Chinese fight bravely when under good generals. The Japanese are not wanting in courage, and the present war may grow into a more gigantic struggle than is generally looked for. Japan's chance lies in striking rapidly and effectively before China can get its sluggish and tremendous forces in motion.

THE fig industry has met with a good many backsets in this country on account of a lack of information in regard to the varieties best adapted for commercial purposes and a want of care in drying and preparing the fruit for market. There is no fruit which requires greater care in handling after the first requirements of planting a good variety in suitable soil has been complied with, and growers here have in very few cases taken the necessary care in drying and packing to meet with the success which will eventually be achieved. A superior article of dried figs commands good prices, and for that class of goods the market is open to a largely increased production. The fig tree has cut a prominent figure in the world ever since our first parents obtained their summer costumes from that source, and now that the attention of experts in fig growing and packing have been attracted to Fresno county, there is no good reason why the historic fig tree should not become the source of great profit to the growers here.

IF "General" Kelly undertakes to lead another army of industrials from California eastward he is not likely to meet with much discouragement from the people of this coast, although the lack of opposition will be from a selfish motive which cannot be commended. It has been demonstrated that Kelly and his kind have the best solution of the tramp problem that has yet been proposed, so far as this coast is concerned. As the army moves through the state it gathers up the idlers as effectually as a magnet collects steel filings. California will be rid of the vagabond element for a long time; for, they will work their way back very slowly, and some will never come back. It may be somewhat rough on the Eastern states for this coast to dump all its indigents upon them, but those states are populous, and will not notice the small additions, while it will be a relief to California which will be noticeable for some time in the future. The principal obstacle in the way of a second enterprise of this kind on the part of "General" Kelly will be in finding a sufficient number of dupes to follow his banner.

IT is stated that the farm at the city and county hospital has returned $1900 since the beginning of the year. This looks like a pretty sure guarantee that a poor house out on the county lot could be made self-supporting. The small amount of physical labor involved in cultivating vegetables would be rather enjoyed than otherwise by the indigents. The great Napoleon did garden work at St. Helena with benefit both to mind and body, and his health failed rapidly when circumstances compelled him to discontinue it. Fresno indigents should at least have the opportunity to do enough work to guard against attacks of gout and dyspepsia.

"FOSTERING the Savage in the Young," is the caption of a paper in the August Arena which comes from the pen of the editor of the Review. It deals with the remarkable growth of military organizations within the pale and under the auspices and encouragement of the Christian churches. The writer views this development of militarism from the standpoint of the peace society, and points out the incongruity of this lust for war. Lowell calls it murder, and the avowed purposes of the Christian churches. A spirited and interesting response from the churches may be confidently expected.

THE Tulare Register believes that Dave Hill is standing in with the house tariff bill because there is no hope of passing it, but that he may thereby defeat the senate bill and incidentally the income tax which is the feature of both bills which David has apparently taken the contract to wipe out. Having failed to defeat that feature of the bill by direct attack, it is not at all improbable that the wily Senator is taking a circuitous route to accomplish that purpose. That he actually takes any stock in the President or other free raw material is preposterous nonsense.

THE high school at Providence, R. I., will this year begin a new department, in which girls will be instructed how to cook and make dresses. When they graduate their honors will not depend upon the brilliancy of their essays on abstract subjects, but solely upon the excellency of the dinners they can prepare and upon the neatness of their sewing and fitting. A diploma from this department ought to be a prizewinner in the matrimonial lottery.

IN the language of the late Debs, this is the time for Democrats "to stand pat and yield nothing."—Visalia Times.

There may be some question about standing pat, but when it comes to yielding nothing the Democratic administration is strictly in it. It hasn't yielded enough up to date to make a respectable famine.

THE Democratic purificationists in San Francisco appear to have an Augean stable in the new city hall. It has just leaked out that one department was assessed $10,000 to carry the primaries that were never held.

MRS. ANNA H. SMITH, the socialist agitator who came here with the industrial army, is reported as "somewhere in Ohio," but where is General Barker, and where is that $500 in the industrial treasury?

THE reports from San Francisco about the feud in the city Democracy would seem to lend color to the theory that Cris Buckley is putting on his war paint. If you don't believe it ask Max Popper.

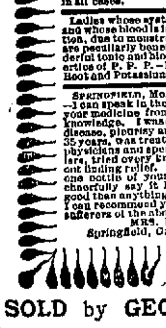

THIS is the dull season, and if the Corea trouble peters out it will be in order for the monarch of the dailies to send another of its inventive geniuses down to Fresno in search of a sensation.

IF the raisin growers of the county are going to complete the combine of 80 per cent, they should lose no time. The way to combine is to combine.

"THERE's a name that's never spoken," at least in Democratic conventions. The name is Grover Cleveland.

Makes Marvelous Cures in Blood Poison Rheumatism and Scrofula

P. P. P. purifies the blood, builds up the weak and debilitated, gives strength to weakened nerves, expels diseases, giving the patient health and happiness where sickness, gloomy feelings and lassitude first prevailed.

For primary, secondary and tertiary syphilis, for blood poisoning, mercurial poison, malaria, dyspepsia, and in all blood and skin diseases, like blotches, pimples, old chronic ulcers, tetter, scald head, boils, erysipelas, eczema—we may say, without fear of contradiction, that P. P. P. is the best blood purifier in the world, and makes positive, speedy and permanent cures in all cases.

Ladies whose systems are poisoned and whose blood is in an impure condition, due to menstrual irregularities, are peculiarly benefited by the wonderful tonic and blood cleansing properties of P. P. P.—Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium.

SPRINGFIELD, MO., Aug. 14th, 1893.—I can speak in the highest terms of your medicine from my own personal knowledge. I was affected with heart disease, pleurisy and rheumatism for 35 years, was treated by the very best physicians and spent hundreds of dollars, tried every known remedy without finding relief. I have only taken one bottle of your P. P. P., and can cheerfully say it has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I can recommend your medicine to all sufferers of the above diseases.

MRS. M. M. YEARY, Springfield, Green County, Mo.

ABERDEEN, O., July 21, 1891.—MESSRS. LIPPMAN BROS., Savannah, Ga.: DEAR SIRS—I bought a bottle of your P. P. P. at Hot Springs, Ark., and it has done me more good than three months' treatment at the Hot Springs. Send three bottles C. O. D.

Capt. J. D. Johnston.

To all whom it may concern: I hereby testify to the wonderful properties of P. P. P. for eruptions of the skin. I suffered for several years with an unsightly and disagreeable eruption on my face. I tried every known remedy but in vain, until P. P. P. was used, and am now entirely cured.

Skin Cancer Cured.

Testimony from the Mayor of Sequin, Tex.

SEQUIN, TEX., January 14, 1893.—MESSRS. LIPPMAN BROS., Savannah, Ga.: Gentlemen—I have tried your P. P. P. for a disease of the skin, usually known as skin cancer, of thirty years' standing, and found great relief; it purifies the blood and removes all irritation from the seat of the disease and prevents any spreading of the sores. I have taken five or six bottles and feel confident that another course will effect a cure. It has also relieved me from indigestion and stomach troubles. Yours truly,

Excursion No. 6

Through the Lands of

Mormondom

To Shoshone

Falls!

Our Readers are Conducted on a sixth excursion by means of the charming pictographs and fascinating descriptive matter in

GLIMPSES

AMERICA

From Salt Lake City, with its many interesting sights and mountainous environments, around the shores of the Great Salt Lake, through Weber and Echo Canyons, up Bear River valley, and thence along Snake River, over the lava beds of Idaho, and to Shoshone Falls. Full description and illustration of Salt Lake is contained in No. 6 of

Our Exquisite Portfolio

With all the wondrous scenery thereabout, including Red Butte and Emigrant Canyons, Giant's Cave and its story of slaughter, the Wasatch Mountains, Fort Douglas and the buildings of Salt Lake.

The wonderful formations in Weber and Echo Canyons are likewise delightfully described, such as the Devil's Slide, Gibraltar, Steamboat Rock, Church Buttes, The Witches, and the Washakie Bad Lands with their marvelous form, imitative of tremendous ruins. Thence the reader is taken down Green River along vermilion cliffs, and then back through Ogden Canyon, to Pocatello, and along Snake River through a desolation where the fiery sputa of burning volcanoes has overspread the land and cracked it to amazing depths. Over one hundred miles of scoriæ the excursionit is carried until the weary ing landscape is broken by a view of Shoshone Falls, a Niagara in volume, a mighty, dreadful, thundering sea breaking over cliffs three hundred feet high and plunging into a vortex that is awesome to behold. The description of these amazing falls given in GLIMPSES OF AMERICA, is one of the most exquisite examples of word painting to be found in the English language.

The Photographs

That appear in No. 6 comprise the following:

Mount Nebo, Pulpit Rock, Weber Canyon, Oldest House in Salt Lake, Witch Rocks, Mormon Tithing House, Hanging Rock, The Devil's Slide, Tea Pot Rock, Place Where Brigham Young Preached His First Sermon in Utah, Maiden of the Bad Lands, Witch Rock in the Bad Lands, Monument Rock, Giant's Club, Banks of Snake River, Bad Lands, Weber Valley, Petrified Trees, Cedar Canyon, Beauties of the Bad Lands, Bluffs of Green River;

In all 17 Lovely Views, and

Each One Eloquently Described,

Not in brief footnotes, but in running text, elaborate full and diversified with legends, stories and charming incidents, that makes it a book to be read as well as to be examined for its superb illustrations.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN

Trees Dying From Want of Care.

DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN TACTICS

They Will Proselyte the Populists. Why Fahey Overthrew Ike Myer.

There were three churches about to be built in Fresno a couple of years ago, the Methodist Episcopal, the M.E. Church South and the Catholic. All of the present structures belonging to these denominations were spoken of as about to be replaced by new ones. The town had outgrown them all, and their congregations were no longer able to assemble there without crowding. But, of late, nothing more is heard of the matter. If new edifices, such as were in contemplation, were erected, two of them would face on the court house park and the third would be very near it, and they would add much to the attractiveness of that part of the city. Perhaps, the presence of the hard times has been felt as well in church affairs as in the affairs of the more worldly.

* * *

Times may be hard and money scarce, but still there is something that the people of this city might do, not very expensive, and which would add much to the appearance of the whole town. The trees should be trimmed. They need it. They have needed it for a long time, and a better opportunity for doing it will never occur than the coming three months. Fresno's trees are its chief beauty. They add to the comfort of the people in summer. But many of the trees are dying, and some are already dead for want of attention. Too much foliage about the trunk of a tree saps its life. Trees cannot flourish when they are covered with cions, limbs, knots, gnarls, sprouts and other growths that should not be there. The trunks should be kept clean to a considerable height above the ground. Wild trees take care of themselves. Tame trees cannot. What is needed is the cutting away of about a thousand wagonloads of superfluous growth from the Fresno trees.

* * *

The Reifsky painting, which was on exhibition in Fresno for a week, is causing much comment yet. Not many specimens of art so high as that stopped off at this inland town. But the picture was not universally admired. A newspaper reporter, receiving a complimentary ticket, hastened to see the "Pride of the Harem." But when he caught one glimpse he wheeled and out he went, not even stopping to slam doors behind him in his haste to escape. Just what his opinion of the picture was, has not been ascertained.

* * *

Some time has now elapsed since the several political parties selected their standard bearers in the forthcoming county campaign, and there is a noticeable absence of street-corner politicians who have for several months blockaded the corner of Mariposa and J streets. Occasionally some defeated aspirant for a place on one of three tickets secures an audience and relates how he was "skinned" by the "bosses" who dominated the conventions and dictated the nominations. The successful candidates have gone to the woods in search of the elusive and delusive voter, and the town is therefore enjoying a much needed rest. The Populists still frequent the corners, but public appreciation of their ideas has long since paled, and they now talk to the winds that blow in frequent installments. As a result, street-corner politics are now at a low ebb.

* * *

A story is going the rounds to the effect that W. D. Grady is highly indignant on account of the report being circulated by certain Democrats that he accepted Fahey's proxy at the Democratic state convention here and then voted against him. Grady says he never had Fahey's proxy, and would not accept it under any circumstances or conditions.

* * *

The Selma Irrigator has discovered the rather startling state of affairs that Supervisor R. B. Butler is marked out for defeat, if a certain faction, which it does not name, can have its way. The Irrigator declares that $20,000 will be spent to bring about his defeat, if it can not be done for less. This would make a neat campaign sack without any additions, and as the fight is Democrat against Democrat, the spectacle promises to develop into a pleasing Kilkenny affair as the campaign draws nigh. But, the probability is that every effort will be made between now and that time to spread a few barrels of oil upon the troubled waters.

* * *

It is said that T. C. White takes his defeat for the senatorial nomination keenly to heart and has his scalping knife in readiness for effective work next fall. He and Grady have, so the report goes, "joined forces and resolved to do some campaign work on their own hook."

* * *

In the selection of the chairman of the Democratic committee it was the evident intention to placate the Missourians, who have heretofore done the voting while the Tennesseeans held the offices. By the way, Tennessee is pretty liberally represented on the county ticket again. It is a cold day in July when the Tennessee family gets left.

* * *

The Democrats are beginning to sidle up to the Populists, and want to make friends. They are working a deep game, and one which is necessary to their success. They know that nearly all the Populists are ex-Democrats, and every resort and political chicanery known to the craft will be used to get a split in that party in hope that the disaffected element will go back to the fold of Democracy again. The Populists declare they will not go back to the Democrats, but the Democrats think that most of them will when it comes to the pinch. Unless they do go back, the Fresno county Democracy cannot see one ray of hope to light the dark clouds of defeat and obliteration which hang on the horizon of next November. The general understanding is that all Populists are good subjects for proselyting, and sugar-tongued missionaries will go among them and undermine the teachings of Rork and Cator.

* * *

DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN HYMN.

Speak gently of the Populists;
O, we must not forget
That, though somewhat bamboozled,
They are our brethren yet.
Heirs of the selfsame heritage,
They tramp the selfsame sod,
They have but stumbled in the path
Which we in weakness trod.

Speak gently; very few of them
Will vote their ticket straight;
Keep cool, and we will boost them through
The Democratic gate.
Speak gently of the erring;
We yet can win them back
And get from them the thousand votes
Which we so sorely lack.

* * *

There is one thing which cannot be disputed. When Democrat meets Democrat, then comes the tug of war. Fahey, Grady, White and a few more of them have drawn their swords and have thrown away their scabbards. Fahey will soon leave Fresno, but, like, Catiline, he "will not leap the gulf alone." By that he means that he has put the quietus on some of his enemies, among whom he counts Grady, because, as he claims, Grady threw him down at the state convention. But, according to the private Blue Book of the Revengeful Chiefs, Ike Myer also owes his defeat to the wireworkings of Fahey. Myer is a Democrat, although a brother of Jake Myer, the Madera county Republican. He lives at Firebaugh, and wanted to be supervisor. Everybody thought he would receive the nomination, and he thought so himself.

But, in an unguarded moment, and without a thought as to the consequences, some of Myer's friends stabbed Herman Levy in the back. Fahey was working for Levy, and when he saw the stab he did not cover up his face, like Cæsar did, but snatched out the knife from Levy's back, and exclaiming, "Sic semper kirambo!" leaped upon Ike Myer and never stopped slashing at him till he had him entirely out of the supervisorial field, over the fence into strange pastures, where he could not get a supervisor's chair in a thousand years.

That is the way the story runs, and Fahey wears a grim, satisfied smile whenever the subject is mentioned. He considers that when the friends of one candidate go out of their way to harpoon another running for a different office the fight then becomes free. As for Ike Meyer, he was so dazed at first that he didn't know "where he was at." But the whole thing is now quite plain before him, and he realizes that a Democratic boss is a thing not to be fooled with.

Soldiers Coming Home.

The provisional company that was left at Bakersfield when the main body of the militia was ordered home has received orders to break camp, and the Fresno boys will arrive home on the 8:45 train this morning. All possibilities of any demonstrations on the part of the strikers at Bakersfield seem to be passed.

The company was made up of about sixty volunteers from the various companies of the Sixth regiment. About twenty-five of these are members of the two Fresno companies, most of whom have been in the field since the 12th inst.

Unbidden Visitors.

Joseph Steinwand, who lives four miles north of town, says that those who have never owned an orchard near town can not understand the worry and aggravation due to fruit pilferers. He says the incident reported in which he was said to have fired a shotgun at some ladies who pulled one peach was overdrawn. He says the ladies drove about in his orchard after he ordered them to leave, and that he fired in the air, and that they argued with him when he wanted them to leave. He said that life is made miserable for him by people who trespass on his property, and that from $1 to $3 worth of fruit is stolen daily. Those who know him say he is not inclined to be stingy with his fruit, but has much to put up with.

THE RAILROAD MAN

He is Numerously Represented in Fresno.

THE AFTERMATH OF THE STRIKE

Some Inside Glimpses of Railroad Work on the Fresno Division.

The inconvenience sustained by commercial firms, fruit growers, vineyardists and the traveling public through the utter demoralization of railroad traffic was less severely felt in Fresno than in many interior towns of California, but it was sharp enough to make many men wonder how a machine which had worked so smoothly could break down so completely within the compass of a single day.

The thing is worth inquiry and only a very little investigation will show that a railroad division is not any child's play to handle; that it is, in fact, a machine with many wheels and pinions so arranged and interlocked that a little break may stop the working of the whole.

So long as passenger trains arrive and depart on schedule time and freight is received and sent out with reasonable regularity very few people pause to think or care to inquire how trains are made up and dispatched, and how the average railroad man lives, moves, and has his being. There is a popular idea that the ordinary conductor is a man with "a soft snap" and great facilities for getting rich by putting way fares in his pocket; that the engineer has nothing to do but turn a handle and leave the engine to do the rest; that the fireman has only to shovel coal into the furnace door; that the brakeman has only to turn a wheel once in a way, and that the switchmen get big wages for doing work which any farm laborer could do just as well for a forth of the money.

These false impressions have been pretty freely ventilated of late, as the result of the strike, but there is another side of the question which will be a surprise to those who think that railroading is just as easy as running a newspaper or a hotel. Some costly failures have been made in both these lines, too, and the experimenters are like a little boy who caught hold of the mule's tail. They will never do it again.

To begin with the demonstration of the local railroad problem; it may be stated that there are just 638 miles of track on the Fresno division, controlled by Superintendent Frazier. It is an absolutely necessary part of his duties to know exactly at any given moment where each train and each man is over this extensive track.

The force required to perform all the duties involved is light during the summer, but on the Fresno division it always runs high up into the hundreds. Outside of Fresno city there are employed thirty conductors, seventy brakemen, forty engineers, seventy agents and operators, ten switchmen, between 300 and 400 sectionmen and trackwalkers, and 125 men in the shops at Bakersfield. The total force may be safely increased another 100 by adding the men employed here in Fresno on local trains, yardmen, the hands in the round house and repair shops and the clerical and operative staff in the depot itself. To keep track of all the details of all so large a force, operating over so large an area, requires all the executive ability of a brigadier general and no small development of the special qualification of promptitude. Delay is fatal in railroad as in other matters. There is rarely time for second thought.

It was the knowledge as practical railroad men, of the vital relations between railroad men and their employes, that caused the compilers of "The American Railway," a standard work, to write as follows: "As we have before found railroad management in intimate contact with every problem of finance and commerce, it is here confronted with the social and industrial questions involved in labor unions and problems of co-operation. As to the results we can only say that, as war is destructive, no state of warfare even between capital and labor can be permanent. Peaceful solutions must prevail in the end, and progress toward stability, peace and prosperity in railroad operation and ownership, will be progress toward the happy solution of many vexed social questions."

It is not surprising that men who daily face death should unite in fraternal bonds, and the peculiar relations between railroad hands and the corporations which employ them make it the most natural thing in the world that they should organize oathbound societies. These societies are not frowned on or discouraged by high railroad officials so long as they are conservative and peaceful in their methods. The Brotherhood of Trainmen is an example, and its action as a body during the recent strike is the best evidence of its merits.

Every man who goes out to work at night on a freight train, coupling, uncoupling or switching, faces painful injuries or death, as a matter of course. If wages are apparently high, risks are high also, and the poor fellow who is liable at any time to get his foot caught in a "frog" and held till the train runs over him earns every cent of his money.

The freight brakeman has a better time in California than in the east, where he goes from the stove side in the caboose to walk on the slippery top of a moving car with the thermometer at zero, but on the other hand the man who runs a couple of hundred miles in a day along the burning plains of the San Joaquin, and is glad to snatch "cat-naps" in the caboose, is not likely to be envied his job by any of the chronic, "tired men" who make recruits for the industrial army, or loaf on the street corners waiting for some "friend" to put them into a soft job.

Of the locomotive engineer, "the hero of the rail," who shall say that he does not earn his $150 a month? Quick judgment, calm fidelity, a spirit of thrift in the matter of fuel, all these must be his, outside of mechanical expertness of the highest kind. The fireman has no sinecure, apart from the heat of the job, for he must maintain a certain pressure of steam, and every time he opens the fire door the steam goes down. Even the courtly and much envied conductor has his cares. He has to deal with all sorts and conditions of men; to answer off hand a whole encyclopædia of questions; to deal with rough characters and to be ever vigilant above the movements of the train. A serious mistake will cost him his job and once black-listed his name is "Dennis" everywhere. The lone man who walks the track at night; the bridge tender ever watchful for a fire; the train dispatcher, who dare not make a mistake, for a mistake makes a tragedy, the operator who listens to the click of the instrument with his nerves on the full stretch all the time, are no more to be envied than the superintendent, who goes to bed every night with enough worries to rob an ordinary man of his sleep. And yet these ordeals are bravely, cheerfully, silently endured every night by every railroad man on the Fresno division.

EVENTS AT THE BAY.

The Metropolitan Press and State Politics.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—It is not positively known as yet just where the Examiner will land after the campaign opens. At present it is decidedly Populist and is doing a great work in that direction. There is no question as to its independence, and it doesn't make much difference whether it is Cleveland, Buckley or Popper that it goes after when they go wrong, which is too frequently to give it much of a show to take a rest. It is very clever, however, in extending praise when it thinks either one deserves it.

The Post has taken a decided stand, and presents the unmistakable picture of an organ of the railroad corporation and the administration. During the excitement of the strike it did make some woeful breaks in an editorial way, and became amusing. But it has weighty reasons for exhibiting a lack of ability.

The word has gone out that the strike is off and the railroad is now in its normal condition. This is corporation bugle notes, but the troops are still on duty, and deputy United States marshals still travel as guards to each train. It is no secret here that if the soldiers were withdrawn the company could not move a train out of the Oakland mole. This is a bad state of affairs, and business men wish that it were not so. The expense is rolling up on Uncle Sam, and if it keeps up much longer there will be an urgent demand for more bonds.

The investigation at Woodland over the disaster at Sacramento is beginning to get interesting, and if the defense get too smart in working up the case, as indicated by the attorneys, the railroad managers may find it convenient to declare the trial off as well as the strike.

The Democrats are having a lively time in adjusting matters. It was a masterly stroke in Popper to threaten to resign the chairmanship of the county committee and give the story out that Buckley had captured the works. It had the desired effect. It gave the Democratic papers an opportunity to denounce Boss Buckley, and when Max Popper changed his mind they could say that Buckley had been defeated. The fact is, Buckley and Popper are in the harness together, and always have been. They could not be separated any more than the Siamese twins. It was a sly move of the blind boss, and everything is moving along pleasantly.

Uncle Billy Hutchinson is here looking up politics. He says he is the only man that the Democrats of Fresno can afford to sacrifice this time, and as he has only 3,000 to overcome in that district it would be a mighty poor Democrat that couldn't do that much. He feels pretty sure of the nomination for the state board of equalization, and he would make a good one if there was any possibility of his being elected. He has a whole lot of nerve, considering the outlook. BAYITE.

FACE BADLY CRUSHED

ENGINEER COLQUHOUN SERIOUSLY HURT.

Struck by a Heavy Iron Plate at the City Water Works.

M. W. Colquhoun, the engineer at the city water works, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon while at work repairing one of the pumps by being struck in the face by the cover of a handhole.

During the afternoon Mr. Colquhoun noticed irregularity about the pumps, and with his assistant, W. R. Mahoney, he proceeded to locate the cause of the trouble.

Each of the two cylinders of the pump has four valve chambers, which contain fifty-six valves. These chambers are all accessible by small handholes. The men proceeded to remove the plate from a chamber on the inside, next to the fly wheel. Colquhoun sat on the inner edge of the wheel, which is almost eight feet in diameter, and started to unscrew the plate. Mahoney was standing by also unscrewing the bolts. But before they had started to remove the plate, Colquhoun forgot to turn on a cock that relieves the air pressure in the chamber on which they were working. Without warning the plate flew off, grazing Mahoney's body and striking Colquhoun in the face.

His position while sitting on the wheel brought his face in line with the plate he was working on. His head was between two spokes, and when his body fell back from the force of the blow the plate struck one of the spokes and went off at an angle, dropping to the floor several feet away. The unfortunate man was knocked senseless by the blow. He was picked up by willing hands and carried out, and medical assistance was summoned. Doctors Deardorff and Rowell were soon in attendance, and stitched up the wounds on his face.

The blow cut a gash over the left eye through the brow, about three inches in length and to the bone. It also crushed the nose, cutting a ragged and irregular gash through tissues and bone, and breaking the superior maxilary or upper jaw bone so that the teeth could be lifted as though a false set. The inner surface of the upper lip was gashed by the teeth, but not seriously. The flow of blood was mostly into the stomach, and was vomited at frequent intervals during the evening. At midnight Mr. Colquhoun was still unconscious but was breathing better, and the flow of blood had nearly stopped.

The pulse was still very slow, but stronger, and his face was greatly swollen.

Although impossible to say just what the result may be, his condition was more promising than earlier in the evening, but he is still considered in a dangerous condition.

After the wounds on the injured man's face had been dressed he was removed to his home, where a more careful examination of his injuries was made, and it was found he was more seriously injured than at first appeared.

The plate that struck him weighed thirty pounds. The pressure was enough to throw the plate out with considerable force, and had it not been that it struck the spoke and glanced off it would probably have killed him outright.

Paralysis of the Heart.

Two deaths from paralysis of the heart have occurred in the past few days, and the third patient is very low. All come from the west of town about twelve miles. Mrs. I. M. Jacobson died on July 21st, Anders Peterson last Sunday, and Mr. Ring is now very low. Mr. Peterson was brought to Fresno before his death, and Mr. Ring is now in the city.

The Board of Education of the City of Fresno school district will open bids for 2250 square feet of stone slate at 8 o'clock, August 1, 1894. Slate must be best quality, even smooth surface, uniform thickness, three-eighths inch. Sample must accompany bids. Slate delivered f.o.b. cars, Fresno. For sizes apply to G. P. Cumming, Secretary Board of Education.

Having concluded to leave Fresno, all persons indebted to me must call and settle their bills at once.

CALIFORNIA FIGS.

INTERESTING POINTERS BY A SMYRNA NURSERYMAN.

The Chief Cause of Failure Here Is the Lack of the Fertilizing Insect.

Antony C. Denoto, Turkish commissioner to the World's Fair, is a guest at the Huges hotel, and called at THE REPUBLICAN office last night.

Mr. Denoto was born and raised in the great Oriental city of Smyrna, in Asia minor, the world-renowned emporium for figs and raisins, and the center of a section of country largely devoted to fig culture. He is the inventor and patentee of a fruit packing device, specially adapted to packing figs, and has made arrangements with James Porteous to construct and sell the machines. Porteous speaks highly of the device from a mechanical point of view.

Mr. Denoto has been attentively studying fig culture in California, and says without hesitation that the soil and climatic conditions are all that can be desired. But there is one serious defect. The "blastophaga" or insect which transfers the pollen from the male to the female fig, effecting what is called the "caprification" or fertilizing, is either wanting or fails to get in its work, owing to the fig trees being planted in unsuitable localities. The insect is compared by Mr. Denoto with our mosquito or gnat; a small microscopic affair; a mere atom, so to speak, but it is always the tiny small things in which big enterprises fall short of perfection, and fig culture is no exception.

"In my opinion," said Mr. Denoto, "the fig can be fertilized in this country if the trees were planted in this country the same as in the Smyrna district, that is to say in ravines sheltered from the wind, and where the presence of moisture invites the presence and favors the development of the fertilizing insects. Without the insect figs will grow all right, but the skin will be thick, the seeds wanting, and the flavor poor. There is also a tendency in unfertilized figs to become sour in a short time.

"In my country we obtain three crops of figs. The third crop is poor, chiefly because it comes in October, and there is a difficulty in fertilizing the figs. We treat them with a special solution which thins them and keeps them from turning sour. They are then placed in trays in the usual manner and dried, but not sulphured. This is never done in Smyrna fig-drying and packing.

"As to the California figs, I hope to be successful in making them command the same prices that can be obtained for the third crop of Smyrna figs. When the fertilizing process is fully understood here and the trees are planted in the right localities I see no reason why, with proper packing, they should not be fully equal to the "lukoom," or best product of the Smyrna orchards. I have sent a few specially prepared samples of California figs to my brothers at Smyrna, and they write me that the figs so treated brought the same price as Smyrna figs of the second crop."

Incidentally Mr. Denato is giving his attention to a new process of drying and packing Sultana and Thompson's seedless raisins so as to bring the product up to the Smyrna standard.

SCATTERED ROSES.

A little maiden strayed one day
Where roses bloomed along the hedges,
Where dancing daisies decked the way,
And ferns peeped out from mossy sedges.

She heaped her little wooden cart
With the bright blooms to overflowing,
Then turned to go, her little heart
Unconscious where her feet were going.

A hillside lay along before.
With every step the child ascended,
She spilled her roses more and more
Till all were gone, and day was ended.

And when the maiden came not back
Came anxious loved ones out to find her
And traced her by the rosy track
Of all the flowers she left behind her.

Our little maiden grows in grace,
Her path along life's highway tending.
Her still ascending feet we trace
By flowers she droppeth, still unheeding.

THE ASSASSIN.

Polydore Chapoteau, grocer, had retired from business. He had taken a house in the country, where he raised chickens and lived happily. He was considered among the fortunate few who realized their dreams here below.

Chapoteau was a good fellow and was fond of entertaining his neighbors. Champignol was his best friend. They had played some famous games of billiards together and had become intimate, though not without a little rivalry in caroms. Champignol lived at the other end of the village, and every Thursday he came to take pot luck with Chapoteau.

Well, one Thursday when the melons were ripe Champignol arrived, as usual.

"Mme. Chapoteau and the servant have gone to the city and will not return till the last train. We are alone and must prepare our feast ourselves."

Champignol put on the servant's apron, Chapoteau his wife's apron, and while one prepared the vegetables the other one roasted the meat.

It was a fine feast. A melon just ripe, cultivated by Chapoteau with paternal tenderness, appeared at dessert. Champignol adored melons. He left only the rind and the seeds.

"I have eaten too much," he said after the coffee.

He became melancholy. Chapoteau got up, and without saying a word opened a drawer where his pharmacy was arranged, and taking one of the vials poured from it into Champignol's mouth a teaspoonful of medicine.

"You do not find me unprepared," he said. "Do you not feel better?"

Champignol rubbed his hand over his stomach and nodded affirmatively. Suddenly his chin dropped, and he appeared to be asleep.

"Refreshing sleep!" murmured Chapoteau, happy at the effect of his drug, and while waiting for Champignol to awaken he commenced to wash the dishes.

Half an hour later he returned to the room on his tiptoes. Champignol had not awakened.

"I will look after my chickens," said Chapoteau to himself.

Half an hour passed thus. Champignol still slept on.

"He is taking a long nap," thought Chapoteau. "I will arrange the lettuce."

That occupied a full hour. Now Champignol would surely be awake. But Champignol still slept.

"Ah, the idea!" growled Chapoteau, and he commenced to slap his friend on the back, gently at first, then harder and finally with his fists. Champignol did not move.

Then a cold shiver ran over Chapoteau. Had an accident happened to him? Could he have burst a blood vessel? Melons are traitorous.

He opened Champignol's hands and slapped them, opened his mouth and breathed into it. Finally, not knowing what to do, he began to tickle him under his arms and laughed loudly to excite him. In truth, poor Chapoteau had no desire at all to laugh.

Champignol remained as lifeless as a work of art.

"Perhaps it would be better to leave him alone. He will awaken himself."

Chapoteau walked about his garden, a prey to a vague agitation. Suddenly the idea came into his mind that his friend was playing him a trick.

He knelt before him.

"Now, Champignol, no more foolishness. You have deceived me long enough."

Champignol did not move.

"Champignol, dear old Champignol, my dear Champignol, Gnoud, my little Pignol!"

Chapoteau employed all the tones of tenderness, surprise and terror. "Little Pignol" was said in a heartbroken way, with a trembling voice. A stone would have been touched, but Champignol remained insensible.

"Ah, that's it, is it?" said Chapoteau, and becoming fierce he gave his sleeping friend a blow in the face.

"There! Now we shall see!"

Champignol oscillated, swayed and fell forward with his head upon the table.

"Ah! You want to frighten me! That won't do! There and there!" He was becoming exasperated. The honest and gentle Chapoteau had been transformed into an inquisitor.

Suddenly his arm fell. If this should be real! If it were not a joke of Champignol's!

He seized his hat and rushed out like the wind. Where should he go? For the doctor, parbleu! Why had he not thought of that sooner? He was only a few steps from the doctor's house when a terrible thought stopped him short.

He had given laudanum to Champignol, to be sure, but he thought he had given him only a fair dose. Perhaps he had made a mistake. Perhaps he had poisoned Champignol. They would have an autopsy of the body. They would discover the poison. He would be arrested, judged, condemned and dragged to the scaffold!

To the scaffold!

The ideas clashed together in his head. He felt as if a mill wheel were revolving in his brain. He retraced his steps. Perhaps—who knows?—Champignol may have awakened at last!

Vain hope! Champignol had turned green. His hands were as cold as marble. His heart had ceased beating.

Their little pleasuring was turning into a tragedy. Chapoteau buried his head in his hands, sad, distracted, seeing nothing but that inert mass, those rigid members and closed eyes, and through the doors he seemed to hear the noise of the courtroom.

He was alone, without witnesses. No one could prove his innocence. Everything was against him. It would be impossible also to prove an alibi. People had seen Champignol come in, and it was known that he came every Thursday. They had seen him also walking in his garden. Chapoteau believed himself lost. Only one resource was left him. He took Champignol in his arms, lifted him from his chair, and pulling him by his shoulders, his head and his legs dragged him to the end of the garden. It was growing dark. Suddenly a board fell near to Chapoteau. He started, cried out, ready to struggle, thinking the officers had come to arrest him. The silhouette of a cat prowling on the wall in the clear twilight, eased his mind a little.

Near the hedge there was a large round hole. Chapoteau rolled the body of his friend into it. His feet projected beyond, so he covered them with straw.

"Adieu, Champignol," he sobbed. There at least his victim was in a secure place. They would not discover him there very soon. Chapoteau would have time to escape.

He reached the fields, walking straight ahead, without plans. He had only one thought—to get away, to go to the end of the world, but his feet refused to carry him. Every few minutes he was obliged to sit down by the roadside. He had knotted a handkerchief about his head, so as not to be recognized. Already he was devising the ruses of the criminal.

Three hours had sufficed to lose his assured position, to make an assassin of him, to lower him to the ranks of the greatest rascals. What did his conscience matter to him? He would not be the less culpable in the eyes of the world, and his crime would appear all the more horrible because his victim had been his best friend. And yet he had been an honest man during 55 years. He had practiced all the virtues. He had dreamed of dying in his bed. Poor Chapoteau! Most unfortunate Mme. Chapoteau!

He saw himself on the bench of the accused. The judge was talking to him. They had spread out before him the victim's clothes, and in the darkness the crowd howled, stamped and threatened to kill him.

Then a greater fear spurred him on, and he began again to walk. Sometimes he stopped, believing he could hear some one running after him. The trees took on strange forms in the darkness. The wind whispered, "Poisoner!" He stopped for a long time on the bank of a pond trying to persuade himself to jump in.

A noise of footsteps caused him to look up suddenly. Two policemen were coming toward him. In the dusk they seemed enormous, like the pillars of the guillotine.

"It is all over," moaned poor Chapoteau, "they have followed me. They will arrest me."

He hid himself behind a hedge. The policemen passed on.

Chapoteau wandered for an hour or two. He could no longer see nor hear. His head swayed on his shoulders, as an empty gourd sways in the wind.

"By this time," he thought, "I should be in my bed at home."

And distracted by his fears he stumbled against a wall. There were houses in front of him, black as his crime, as his thoughts, as his remorse. However, a light gleamed beneath a door. Tired out, his strength and energy exhausted; he knocked. He heard voices inside. Finally they opened the door.

Chapoteau gave a loud cry.

"Champignol!"

It was Champignol in person. He had awakened in the hole and was still laughing at the joke.

Champignol a joker indeed! Chapoteau thought himself dreaming.

Then he had not given a fatal dose of laudanum—though a little too much, it is true.

He had not killed Champignol. He had not committed a crime! He would not die on the scaffold! He touched Champignol with the tips of his fingers, as one touches a delicate piece of game, fearing that this shape was only Champignol's shadow.

In reality, Chapoteau never forgave Champignol for the fright which he gave him that day.—Translated From the French For Romance.

Anointed Stones.

The custom of anointing stones with oil (see Genesis xxviii, 18, 19), and leaving them as memorial pillars or objects of worship was one that was very common among the ancients. The stones first worshiped were probably of meteoric origin, which, having been seen to fall from heaven, were easily associated with some deity. In Roman mythology Abadires was the name given to a stone which was worshiped because it was the general belief that it had once been swallowed by Saturn.

The "standing images" referred to as being prohibited in Leviticus (xxvi, 7) are thought to have been these same "anointed stones." In the light which modern investigation has thrown upon the curious customs of the early east, the act of Jacob which is recorded at the first Scriptural reference mentioned in this "note" is of special interest as showing the mood of his mind and heart after a night's entertainment of such a gracious and blessed vision. To this day the "anointed stones" of the orient are called Baetylia, which Bochart suggests may be derived from Bethel, where Jacob first anointed a pillar as a sacred memorial.—St. Louis Republic.

MYSTERIES OF FLORIDA.

An Underground River That Makes Things Very Lively at Times.

Two miles south of Gainesville is a prairie. At certain seasons strangers wonder why it is called a "prairie," for they look out upon a broad stretch of water so deep that storms churn its surface into rolling white capped billows. At times the commerce of the lake is done by steamer, while at other times there is not water enough to float a canoe. In fact, I have crossed the prairie in the steamer and again have gone over identically the same route in a stage from whose wheels clouds of dust would roll.

On the edge of the prairie, half walled in by rock, dense with immense trees draped in long festoons of moss, is a pool of water called "The Sink." The depth of it has never been sounded. From this sink an underground river flows and makes its way no one knows where. Sometimes an acre or so of land, trees and all, will fall into the underground river, and then the drainage of the prairie is obstructed, and the prairie "goes dry." In a year or two the river will have seeped around the obstruction, and then the prairie "goes wet." In the neighborhood of Gainesville there are hundreds of the sinks, all of them as round as a dollar and averaging from a quarter to a half acre in extent.

North of Gainesville is a pretty and mysterious spot called the "Devil's Millhopper." A large stream of water comes down hill with considerable force and disappears in a pool that has no visible outlet. Near Brooksville is another pool very similar to the "Devil's Millhopper." A stream of water pours into it and disappears in a whirlpool in the center. Throw a log in it, and it will circle the pool many times, gradually drawing nearer to the center. Suddenly the log disappears.

Some gruesome stories are connected with the Brooksville pool. It is said that the place is haunted, for the reason that many a man, and woman, too, has mysteriously disappeared in it, never to be heard of afterward. In the pioneer days of that part of the country, so the stories go, there was a secret society which washed all its dirty linen in that pool. In other words, if a man or woman gave grave offense to any members of the society, he or she was gagged, bound and in the darkness of night thrown into the pool.—Florida Times-Union.

ABOUT WATERWORKS.

The Costly Schemes Which Have Been Carried Out to Give Good Supply.

At a cost of $12,500,000 Manchester is just completing a system of water supply by which Thirlmere, one of the English lakes in Cumberland county, 95 miles away, has been dammed and water supplied to the city of the best quality in quantities sufficient for all probable needs. Manchester has also completed a ship canal to Liverpool, so that the largest vessels in the mercantile marine can lie at her docks. The City of Mexico at a cost of $10,000,000 is just completing a drainage system that will carry the overflow of the great basin to the sea, thus warding off overflows and resultant malaria.

Greece has just completed the Corinthian canal at enormous expense, by which a short cut from Venice and Trieste is afforded to Athens and Constantinople. It has cost many millions and was first undertaken before the Christian era. Austria has just completed the destruction of the "iron chains of the Danube" at a cost of many millions, a work begun in the days of the Cæsars, which is of inestimable commercial value to the city. These are a few of the great works undertaken seriously in recent years and brought to a successful conclusion. Each one will prove a profitable investment. They have been carried out on business principles. There are several problems before the people of this country, which ought also to be considered on business principles. These problems are important and can all be solved if courage, enterprise and sagacity are used. They will fail if old fogy notions are allowed to rule as they have for generations past.—Fire and Water.
